

Welcome to Legimus and the world of talking books!

The child you are the guardian of has the opportunity to access talking books via a personal user account with Legimus.

What is a talking book?

A talking book is an audio recording of a book that already exists as a printed book. MTM produces talking books pursuant to the Act on Copyright in Literary and Artistic Works. They are recorded especially for people who, due to impairment, illness or injury, have difficulty reading printed text.

What is Legimus?

Legimus is a digital library under the responsibility of the Swedish Agency for Accessible Media, MTM. Using the account, the child can borrow talking books. The child can use Legimus both in school and during their free time.

What is available in Legimus?

Legimus contains more than 115,000 talking books, both fiction and non-fiction. There are also talking books in other languages. Some talking books simply read the text while many also contain text and pictures. At legimus.se/barn you can find book tips and articles on all sorts of exciting topics. The child can also submit their own tips to recommend books to others.

How the child can read talking books

The child can read talking books in a number of ways: on their phone, tablet or computer using the Legimus app or with the Legimus web player.

Support

The account with Legimus is administered by a public or school library. The child can turn to their library for help with the Legimus account.

User Agreement for Legimus

- The books are protected by the Act on Copyright in Literary and Artistic Works and may only be used by people who, due to an impairment, find it difficult to read printed text.
- When you download the talking book or place it in Bokhyllan, it is considered a loan. The loan period is 6 months. The book is returned by deleting the files.
- The login details and the books are intended for the child's own use and may not be disclosed to others.

What happens if the child violates the agreement?

- If the child violates the agreement, they lose the right to use the service.
- Unlawful dissemination of talking books is a violation of the Act on Copyright in Literary and Artistic Works and can lead to prosecution. When the talking books are downloaded, they are labelled with information on who borrowed the talking book. In the event of unlawful dissemination, MTM can trace who borrowed the talking book.

Data Protection

MTM stores and uses your and your child's personal data in accordance with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR, 2016/679/EU). The name, e-mail address and personal identity number, or date of birth and designation number on the Asylum Seeker Card (LMA card), are registered in MTM's user register. The same applies to the name and date of birth of the child's guardian. The name, e-mail address and personal identity number, or date of birth and designation number on the Asylum Seeker Card (LMA card), must always be entered in the user register. MTM cannot issue an account if you oppose such registration. The data may be used to conduct statistical surveys and evaluations of our services. You are always entitled to refuse to be contacted for surveys. This can be done through "Mina sidor" at legimus.se or by contacting your library.

Persons with protected personal data may request that their data is handled in a classified part of the register. Information registered here only includes the personal identity number and e-mail address, or date of birth, designation number on your child's Asylum Seeker Card (LMA card) and e-mail address, along with the name and date of birth of a guardian. Only a limited number of people at MTM can see the data.

Learn more about how we process personal data in our privacy policy. This can be found at www.mtm.se/hantering-av-personuppgifter/

MTM has the right to change the user rules if justified. As the guardian of a child using Legimus, you are obliged to keep updated on any changes on your own initiative and to promptly notify MTM's Call Centre of any objection to such changes. If you object to a change, access to Legimus may be revoked on MTM's initiative.

This agreement has been updated on 22/05/2018 and is valid until further notice.
